

Company

Brian specializes in rockscaping which other contractors do not like to do--like a project that puts his bobcat precariously hanging over water 70 feet in the air. Whether it is a small job, a risky one, flat stone, tight quarters or just a difficult design--he accepts the challenge because he can visualize the steps needed to finish the look to the satisfaction of the customer. He has the unusual gift of being able to quickly surmise each move required to complete the job as he plans the design. Brian's ability to visualize the steps and determination to complete the job as the owner specified, made completing the design workable.